

Abstract of the Disclosure

A system and method for improving cooling of a heat-generating component in a closed-loop cooling system is shown. The system comprises a venturi having a throat which is coupled to an expansion tank that may be exposed to atmospheric pressure in the embodiment being described. A closed expansion tank may be provided in the system to force or continue to cause fluid flow to cool the heat-generating component after a pump stops.